Casinos accepting US players abound throughout the Internet. There are however some that do not accept US players so it's important to understand beforehand which ones do and don't if you are interested in pursuing online gambling.

The most common online casinos accepting US players are advertised as "Vegas style", and often have "Vegas" or "Las Vegas" in the name. As the name implies, they are modeled after the casinos in Las Vegas. Casino payment methods seem to generally be the easiest for US players as well, following standard procedures found in any similar monetary Internet transaction. For the player looking to sign up in a hurry and start playing right away these are a sure fire bet.

Canadian online casinos cater specifically to Canadian players in Canada in every respect. There are some casinos accepting US players but many of them do not. Many of them use financial systems for their payouts that do not service the U.S.

When considering a Canadian online casino it is best to check their website thoroughly for country regulations and payouts before opening an account and downloading their online casino software. Also be sure to check software and system requirements at the same time. This information is usually listed on the download or FAQ page but when in doubt contact the casino directly and ask. A prompt reply indicates a reputable casino with good customer support.

European online casinos are generally the most accessible from any country. By and large they not only accept the largest number of currencies but many have up to a dozen different languages including English, Spanish, Portuguese, Dutch, German and Japanese. If a player visiting an online casino sees a collection of flags in an upper corner then the casino is multi-lingual.

Lucky 18 Casino is available in half a dozen languages while Sloto Cash is available in 11 different languages including British, American and Australian English. And yes, the three are quite different. For Americans, and therefore US players, Australian English is closer to British English but with its own slang and idioms, as many and as unique as American English.

Ex-pats are familiar with these differences and may enjoy an alternate dialect but for US players who have never lived outside North America it would be safer to stick with American English when presented with the choice.

Choosing a top online casino is largely a matter of personal preference and taste but can also be a practical matter. Las Vegas themed casinos typically cater to US players and players from other countries wanting a taste of Vegas. The software, payment methods and restrictions are fairly standard for the US and players can expect a smooth transaction in this respect.

Canadian online casinos are geared specifically to Canadians living in Canada and appear to have the most restrictions on US players.

European online casinos on the other hand seem to accept just about anybody who meets the basic requirements of age and valid credit card.

But again these are generalities, not across the board rules, so the player should always thoroughly check out any casino before opening an account.

THE BEGINNING Whether it is the thrill, winning, risk, competitiveness or sheer adventure, there is something about casinos that spark a fire of interest in the gambling community. One region that ranks high in adulation is the United States. We could most likely thank Las Vegas for introducing the nation to one of the hottest gambling destinations on earth. Regardless of any negative connotations linked to the mafia in yesteryear, the casino movement persevered and took not only the American public by storm but the world.

A new wave of excitement erupted, and it swept through the U.S. like wildfire in the mid-1990's. The gambler was about to embark on a new journey of participation, all through the wonderful world of online casinos. It brought about Americans who seized the opportunity for this new internet gambling concept where it flourished and took off like gangbusters!

Among the first online casinos to enter this new arena were InterCasino, The Gambling Club, and Intertops Casino from 1994 to 1996. The early igaming software at that time was Cryptologic and Microgaming aka the "Godfather" in the industry. Before you knew it, newly launched sites including poker and sports betting portals were popping up everywhere and for the U.S., the sky was the limit.

You might say this at home convenience was too good to be true and it was inevitable, the bough would break at some point. Well, not exactly, perhaps a crack when then-President George W. Bush signed The Unlawful Internet Gambling Enforcement Act of 2006 (UIGEA) into law.

Naturally, it caused pandemonium for players who woke up and discovered they could no longer make deposits at their favorite sites.

After sifting through legalities of the new law it gave a sigh of relief because contrary to what some may think, the player isn't breaking the law, it is the financial institutions that the gavel has come down hard on. Banks are no longer allowed to fund any accounts for the purpose of gambling; therefore, a middleman or other means to fund accounts have popped up replacing traditional methods.

After the UIGEA had gone into effect, many U.S. betting portals shut down altogether. At that point, only a few were still taking bets from players in this region. Most of them were running only RTG software and were licensed in Costa Rica. Many weren't worth playing at or trustworthy.

Today we display only the finest and most trusted online casinos available for play in the United States. Most of these online casinos are above and beyond a single platform of products and provide multiple software including proprietary games too. There are still the longtime favorites like Real Time Gaming (RTG) that have endured the test of time attracting a broad audience.

The U.S. facing sites we list are known to pay their affiliates and customers promptly earning the integrity and respect required to run an honest business. Many states are now providing licensing and regulating their own internet casinos. Land-based operators are also opening their online counterparts. If you live in one of these locations, we recommend using the ones that are regulated. For players living outside of these jurisdictions, it's still a challenge to find the right place where you can play and feel safe. That's where our online casino guide comes in handy.

For many operators, they have regained their faith in the industry with the resurgence of new software to help fill the void left in 2006. Software like Saucify, NuWorks, Wager Gaming Technology, Rival and Slotland Entertainment accommodate the U.S. market. Along with a handful of other software brands, these companies are instrumental in providing a large stable of slots and table games desperately needed for this region.

Since we came online in 2002 we have reviewed hundreds of online gaming sites. All are safe places to play unless noted otherwise. Ownership and management changes, terms and conditions evolve, and sometimes an online casino simply goes bad. We stay on top of that for you. Please check often as we continually add new sites to our list. If you feel that any of the casinos aren't worthy to be on our U.S. list, please contact us immediately and we will reevaluate.

You can get in-depth information by reading the reviews - and we encourage you to do that! However, if each word in those reviews represented a mile on the globe, you'd have to travel around the planet 10 times to read them all! That wouldn't leave much time to find your favorite place to play, so we've sifted and sorted and run them through the crucible for you.

Below you'll find our Top 8 US Casinos, a quick-hit list of each one's high points, and links to their respective reviews. Please keep in mind that just because one is in the top position today, that doesn't mean it won't be bumped from its lofty perch tomorrow. Every one of these sites has what it takes to be shown in the premier list as the crème de la crème of online casino.

Most of the games at US-facing sites, or anywhere for that matter, are slot machines. The most popular are video bonus slots. It took decades for the games to evolve from mechanical 3-reel machines in the 1800s, to electromechanical one-armed bandits in the 1960s, and then into spinning virtual reels on video displays in the 1970s. Since the late 1990s innovation has exploded in the online world and on land.

Online slots have reflected popular culture from the beginning. The games come in so many themes that it has become more meaningful to classify them by their features and bonus mechanics than by their appearances or narratives.

Nowadays many slots are created to give players an adventure, not only in storyline but in progress through various bonus mechanics. Multilevel progressive games within the game, interactive storylines, and elements of skill can all be part of spinning the reels now.

One of the first skill-based games with free spins, expanding wilds, and a progressive bonus round was Rival's Hole in Won. Whenever a player lands three or more scatter symbols, they're taken to a second screen game where the object is to putt a golf ball into the hole in as few shots as possible. Each of the nine holes gets a little bit harder to make par. The fewer strokes it takes to sink the ball, the higher the cash reward.

Long before skill-based gaming hit the slot floors of casinos in Las Vegas and Atlantic City, Microgaming released Max Damage and the Alien Attack in regulated markets online. The game is designed to look like a modern video slot but is more of an old-school arcade game like Space Invaders - with cash prizes. Instead of spinning the reels you destroy invading spacecraft to win random coin amounts.

While that was fun it wasn't the end of innovation by any stretch of the imagination. Betsoft, the originators of 3D slots, released the best of console and casino gaming so far with Max Quest in September 2018.

Up to six players enter the role-playing action/adventure RNG gambling game and traverse an underground maze, fighting off dangers in search of treasure.

We may not be able to play all 3764 video slots games across 146 software brands online (and counting!) from here in the U.S., but we sure haven't been left behind by slot makers serving the United States!

Some players never take the time to explore the classic 3-reel slots. They may be missing out on some good wholesome fun and potential big returns. WGS Technology (Wager Gaming) has developed games with bonus rounds as well as progressive slots with "must pay by" levels. The closer the jackpot gets to the must pay target, the better your odds of taking down $25,000 on a $0.03 spin. Somebody will win the jackpot before it reaches $25,000!

Betsoft, Saucify, and Rival have also put some real effort into keeping some of their new reel slot releases relevant with smart themes, catchy bonus features, wild multipliers, and catchy sound effects. If you "walk on by" these games, it may be time to have a second look.

Pssst... some of them have a super high return to player (RTP) percentage too!

Realtime Gaming has released several reel slots with random jackpots. Look for Santastic, Jumping Beans, and Three Stooges II to get a feel for the games.

Betsoft jackpot games look and play just like most of their other cinematic quality slots. If you take a bonus, be sure the casino lets you stake free money before spinning the reels on progressive jackpot games though! Also, check the payable, most Betsoft jackpots require max bet to be played to win the jackpot.

Most RTG "Real Series" games have local progressive random jackpots. All of the spins on the game at that particular casino contribute to the jackpot which can be won on any spin - regardless of the amount staked. Most RTG sites also offer network progressives with jackpots over a million dollars!

Bovada and a few other US-facing sites offer poker tournaments and other real money poker for mobile and desktop players. They'll even show you how to play poker online!

Casino accepting players us best online

Just a few years ago mobile play was hardly worth the effort for American gamblers. Apple's iOS wouldn't even load Adobe Flash, the games got hung up often, and only a few people had fast enough or cheap enough data plans to even bother trying to play on the go.

Much of that has changed and the final hurdle is going away soon. Every gaming site we can play at has an instant play lobby and games now. No iOS, Android, or any other mobile apps need to be downloaded. Desktop players only find a few casinos now that don't even have download lobbies.

One very cool thing about the new breed of games is that they are "responsive" and "device agnostic". This just means that the programming instructs the game to display perfectly on whatever size or shape of a screen you are using - optimizing the gambling experience on a handheld smartphone or tablet and on a high definition widescreen desk monitor.

You may notice that most of the sites included in our Top 8 list have been around since the last century. There is something to be said for history - it can help us hedge our bets now and in the future!

Established operators launch new brands now and then. For the most part, if their legacy online casinos are trustworthy, offer great customer service, and like to keep players happy with bonus offers - the new brand will too.

When we review a new property we look deep into ownership when possible, management, licensing, and any history the operator might have - good or bad. Like the old saw goes, "History doesn't repeat itself but it often rhymes."

Some new casinos will go all out to get new online customers in the first months or years of operation. You can usually find bigger deposit bonuses with lowering wagering requirements and no maximum amount of cash you can withdraw. They might offer new payment options and super juicy bonuses for using the preferred deposit method.

While we all enjoy a challenge and a fair fight, we also like to win! These introductory offers can be your best chance to get a leg up on the house edge and make a good cash out. After all, the operation wants new customers!

What better way to win your heart and mind than to drop a couple of thousand dollars into your Bitcoin wallet, bank account, or mailbox? It can make a big first impression and players tend to remember big wins. The casinos hope you will become a loyal customer so they'll be doing everything they can to impress you.

You can usually learn about ownership, management, and any sister-sites in the first few paragraphs of our critical and fair online casino reviews. Many review pages also include player ratings from a variety of trusted review sites along with an overall average rating.

Even though all of the publically traded NASDAQ-listed companies pulled out of the US when the UIGEA was slipped into a must-pass bill in 2006, some online casino providers never left and many more have come to serve the market since then.

We keep our ear to the ground and listen for new rumbles every day - whether its changing reputations of existing properties - or exciting new places for American players to visit. With a dedicated staff here and a network of sites employing around 70 people, not much gets past us.

Despite the specific difficulties these online casino operators have experienced due to specific laws in the States, those operating the market offer their player pool the full range of bonus options. This means that all players will benefit from the corresponding offer – starting from No Deposit bonuses and free spins, through Welcome offers to regular Deposit-related bonuses.

The top reputable US online casino sites listed at this page have been tested beforehand in order to ensure players that they can enjoy proven fair gameplay. While our staff performs their own tests, these top operators often hire separate audit companies to run tests on the games' RNG and similar functionalities. Some of the companies in the business of auditing online casino games software include iTech Labs and Gaming Laboratories International among other reputable names.

The respective licensing and regulatory bodies in the legal gambling states across the US are the best choices when it comes to reporting a suspicious or rogue operator. For example, in Nevada, the respective bodies are the Nevada Gaming Control Board and the Nevada Gaming Commission; in Pennsylvania – the Pennsylvania Gaming Control Board and so on.

So far, US players have predominantly enjoyed the gameplay at offshore online casino sites, where their winnings weren't subject to the taxation policies of their resident state. However, with regulation coming forward and licensing online casino operators in each jurisdiction separately, players will need to check the specific tax policy of their state and get charged accordingly.

Accepting casino us players best online

Just like all other reputable online casinos, US operators can include multiple skins to their platform – poker room, sports betting, fantasy sports and even a bingo room. All you have to do is check if your chosen casino brand offers such content; finding one shouldn't be too hard these days.

The US online gambling stage is in a state of constant flux, with new states coming forward and seriously considering the legalization of online gambling in the US. Nevertheless, the first three states to legalize gambling back in 2013 when authority was officially handed over to local governments were Nevada, New Jersey and Delaware. Four years later, Pennsylvania joined in, prompting several others (West Virginia, per say) to look into the matter more closely.

Yes, most of the online casino game developers tend to build their games in demo mode and real money gameplay both. That way, players can try out the game mechanics, get a taste of the casino player traffic and generally have a better online gambling experience.

Most commonly, these online casinos tend to focus on the US dollar, since it is the main currency used across the States. Players are usually welcomed to deposit in other currencies as well, as long as they don't mind the exchange fee charged along the way. Other times, when dealing with internationally available operators, players can choose between multiple currency options, since the operator aims to meet the needs of a wider player audience.
