The International Conference on Management for Sustainability: Strategies and Technology Intervention (ICMS 2025), hosted by the School of Management Sciences, IEST Shibpur, concluded on a high note last month. Organized as part of the department's Silver Jubilee celebrations, the two-day event brought together leading academicians, industry professionals, and young researchers to deliberate on one of the most pressing issues of modern time—Sustainability.

The conference served as a vibrant platform for over 30 research presentations, covering diverse themes such as renewable energy, sustainable supply chains, climate change economics, financial inclusion, women's entrepreneurship, HR management, and the role of artificial intelligence in decision-making. Eminent voices from academia and industry enriched the dialogue, with discussions focusing on the urgent need for technology-driven solutions to ensure a greener and more inclusive future.

"Sustainability today is not a choice but an imperative," said Dr. Jnui Deb Mallick Datta, Joint Convener of ICMS 2025 and Faculty at School of Management Sciences, IEST Shibpur. "Through academia-industry collaboration, we can create actionable strategies that combine innovation, inclusivity, and responsibility. The conversations at ICMS 2025 reaffirm our belief that only through collective effort we can chart a meaningful course for the future."

Another key highlight was the exploration of the ethical dimensions of artificial intelligence in management practices, reminding participants that technological progress must be guided by responsibility and inclusivity.

Reflecting on the success of the event, Dr. Datta added, "The true strength of ICMS 2025 lay in its ability to bring together diverse perspectives—from scholars to industry leaders, from emerging researchers to policymakers. This cross-pollination of ideas is what will transform sustainability from theory into practice."

ICMS 2025 not only marked a milestone in IEST Shibpur's academic journey but also reinforced its commitment to driving global conversations on sustainability.
